

SENSING SPACES HANNOVER

Instant Composition Workshop mit Julia Klockow

Time and space are interdependent. We explore the theme of space in dance improvisation from different perspectives. Composing from the moment has its own dynamics and holds degrees of freedom that we will explore in solo, partner and group exercises. With the help of somatic practices, impro-scores, contact improvisation and meditations, we will expand our perception of inner and outer spaces in the two-day workshop. How do we shape the relationship between time and space through our physical presence?

JULIA KLOCKOW:

The choreographer & performer understands the human body as a cultural storehouse of knowledge whose intuitive resources are looking for their place in our society. For her, the performance situation is a social moment that triggers transformative processes. In her work, she always explores the relationship between audience and performer. Her diverse interests in different art forms, such as film or visual arts, flow into her choreographies. She researches in the field of instant composition. www.juliaklockow.com
